THE CESS POOL WALDO STREET.

Menace to Public Health Disease Germ Hatchery.

Should Not Have Been Built, Should be Abolished at Once.

The attention of the CITIZEN was called last week to the cess pool that has been a town institution on the Waldo street extension ever since the Blisbee school house was built.

This pool is about ten feet deep and about the same width. It is full of the sewerage from the Blisbee School and several near-by houses. The stench from it on the day the writer investigated was sickening beyond the power of decent language to express.

It was in a house near by where the first case of diphtheria, in the recent epidemic was developed, and several cases were reported among the scholars attending the Blisbee school. It is not for us to say that the cess pool caused the germs of that disease to become disseminated in that section, but it is a fair presumption that if the cess pool had not been there, there would not have been any cases of diphtheria. It is within our province to advise the immediate abolition of this menace to health. It will be far less dangerous to run the sewerage into the open lot beyond the road.

A cess pool is the breeding place for all the microbes that originate in filth, and a congregating place for all the insects that delight in stench, defiled air, flies swarm there and then fly away and find entrance to the dwellings of men and no doubt leave particles of the filth they have gathered upon whatever they light.

There is no reason for the existence of this offensive and defenseless nuisance. We call upon the proper authorities to abolish it forthwith.

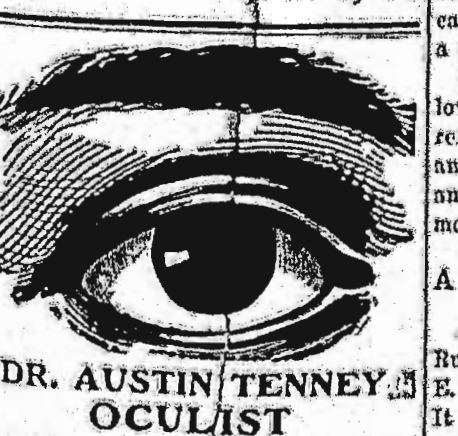

FOUR HORSE TEAM RAN A- WAY.

At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, a four horse team, belonging to Ned Carter of Bethel took fright at the railway station and started on a mad run down Hartford street. When opposite E. K. Day's store, the rear, high horse fell, and was dragged across Congress street where the horses came to a partial halt, in front of McDonald's drug store, where they were seized by bystanders. The wagon was one of the long heavy dower vehicles and the horses large and powerful and if the horse had not fallen and impeded their progress, the amount of damage that would have resulted can hardly be imagined. Although the horse was dragged several rods he was not hurt. The soft mud was his protection from bruises. Rain was descending in torrents at the time.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. LAWTON BARELY ESCAPE DEATH.

Knocked Down on Toll Bridge by Run-away Horse, Friday Noon.

Mrs. Lawton Hurlled into the Air, Turned Two Somersaults and Landed A Rod Away. Both Are Badly Hurt.

Friday at about 12:30 p. m. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lawton were run into on the toll bridge by a horse owned by Will Knowlton and seriously hurt. Mr. Lawton was struck on the left knee by the hub of the carriage and is obliged to use crutches to get about. Mrs. Lawton was struck by the wheel and hurled into the air and thrown nearly a rod, turning two somersaults and landing on her right side. She is painfully and seriously injured, but not dangerously. Her hurts consist of a sprained ankle, bruised left leg and side and an injury to the left arm that deprives it of the power of motion. Her right hip is also badly bruised. There is a slight gash in the abdomen that is very painful and perhaps her most serious injury. Mr. Lawton is an engineer in the International Paper Co.'s mill. The couple live on Granite street, Riddellville.

The Particulars.
Mr. Knowlton, who is a milk dealer, left his team in front of the postoffice in Riddellville. The horse was hitched with an ordinary iron weight. He became frightened at something and made a start for the toll bridge. Miss Lizzie Houghton, who lives on Main street, Riddellville, was on the corner as the horse turned to go onto the bridge. She with great courage and pluck seized the animal by the bridle rein and strove valiantly to stop him. She did not release her hold until thrown to the ground in front of the toll house. It is said that a man was near by when the woman seized the horse, and watched her without attempting to aid.

When the frightened beast was released of all restraint he dashed on to the bridge with the speed of a railway train. Mr. and Mrs. Lawton were about two-thirds the way across the bridge, walking on the south side, approaching Riddellville.

NOTABLE MEDICAL DISCOVER- ERY.

Of Special value to Many People Here in Rumford.

One of the most notable discoveries and one that undoubtedly appeals more than anything else to the people here in Rumford is the combination of stomach remedies in the Mi-o-na treatment. This prescription has worked wonders, and there is now no excuse for anyone suffering from indigestion or weak stomach.

It acts specifically on the muscles of the stomach and bowels, strengthening and stimulating them so that they readily take care of the food that is eaten. It also increases the flow of gastric juices, thus getting from the food the nourishment that is necessary for health and energy.

The symptoms of indigestion are numerous, such as distress after eating, flatulence, heart-burn, sick headache, dizziness and irritability. These are all dispelled by a few doses of Mi-o-na when the trouble is recent, but just as surely in long standing and chronic cases if the treatment is followed for a reasonable length of time.

So positive are the good effects following the use of Mi-o-na that the remedy is sold by the Cote Pharmacy, and Nathan Reynolds of Canton under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it should fail to cure.

A SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

At the special town meeting held in Rumford, Wednesday at 10 a. m., A. E. Morrison Esq. was chosen moderator. It was voted to raise $2,000 for repairs of roads and bridges and $1,000 for the support of the poor; said amounts to be raised by loan.

It was also voted to accept the streets that were petitioned for by George A. Virgin, Rufus R. Virgin and Waldo Pettengill, described in last week's CITIZEN.

There was an informal expression of opinion favorable to completing the Waldo street extension to the Porter property. This street contrary to general belief, is already a highway.

RESIGNS THE PRESI- DENCY OF THE IN- TERNATIONAL PAPER CO.

Mr. Chisholm May Now Devote More Time To Rumford Falls.

A General Hope That He Will Become More Familiar With Our Affairs.

The resignation of the presidency of the International Paper Co., of Hugh J. Chisholm, which took place last Thursday, and the announcement that he will devote his time to the business of the Oxford Paper Co., caused some surprise here, although certain events had given an inkling of what was to be expected. The action has caused the revival of the talk that has before been made that Mr. Chisholm intends to give his personal attention to his various interests in Rumford in a greater measure than before.

There is a general hope that the rumor is true, for it is felt that his better acquaintance with affairs would be beneficial to the town.

There is also a revival of the report that a mill for the manufacturing of wall paper will be built next summer.

TWO PRISONERS ES- CAPED DEATH BY SUFFOCATION

At the Police Station, Sunday.
Post Office and Odd Fellows Building in Danger.

Accidental Presence of Officer Merrill,
Prevents a Tragedy. Fire Caused by Prisoners Pips.

Sunday afternoon at 3:30 a prisoner set the bedding, in his cell, afire and it was a mere accident that he and another prisoner as well as the building were not burned.

It is the exception that an officer is in the station at that hour and the fact that Officer Merrill was in the station was owing to a call that had been sent out for him.

He had not been there more than five minutes and was just on the point of going out when hearing a loud shouting from the cell room he went to the door to see what was going on. At the same moment Postmaster Alwood came running down the stairs saying something was on fire. When the officer opened the door a volume of dense smoke poured out and nearly overcame him. Through the smoke he could see flames in one of the cells, and recovering himself dashed in and released the man. He made an effort to quench the flames but they had got too well started to be extinguished by smothering. He then went for the patent extinguisher and in a few minutes had the fire under control with that.

The smoke had filled the postoffice so that no one could stay in it. When Merrill had got the fire out he had breathed in so much of the smoke that he was for a moment pretty well used up. In the excitement the man who had set the fire made his escape, but was soon recaptured.

The people of Rumford Falls have nothing but an accident to thank for saving the lives of two prisoners and the destruction of the postoffice and great damage being done to the Odd Fellows building.

There is but one entrance to the police station, and there was no possible way that the men could have been gotten out of the cell if the officer had not been present. The cell room is locked and the cells also and even if the outer door could have been knocked down no way could have been devised to release the man who was in a 10x6 cell with a brick fire in progress in it. He surely would have been suffocated before an officer could have been called, and probably the other prisoner as well.

A delay of three minutes would have put the postoffice in flames and with the best work the firemen could have done the matter would have been a tragedy.

MISTOOK THE IDEA STATE NOT SO FREE

As They Were Led To Believe.
Three Luthuanians Fined For Hunting.

They Were Arrested by Game Warden H. C. Ellis at South Rumford, Tuesday.

Game Warden H. C. Ellis arrested John Banis, J. Mozelewski and John Mickolitis, Tuesday morning for violating the game laws.

The fellows were on a hunting expedition in the neighborhood of J. F. Hall's big apple orchard, beyond Virginia. They were foreigners and were unacquainted with the laws of a free State that oblige a man to either be a citizen or pay a special license before he can hunt game.

In consideration of the fact that the Polanders did not know about the law, and were under the apprehension that this was a land of the free for the free, Judge Stearns only charged them the costs of the court for the wisdom they had acquired. They paid and departed thanking the Judge very politely.

destroyed. The cell room is directly under the postoffice.

There were present in the station room several well known men who witnessed the affair from the start to the finish. If the proper officers wish any evidence to corroborate the officer's report they can get it by calling at the CITIZEN office. Attention has been called to the inadequacy of the police quarters several times and it does not seem that any further evidence should be required to move the powers that be to provide a suitable police station.

There is a great amount of police business done at Rumford Falls and will continue to be for many years and decent quarters for prisoners as well as for the officers is necessary.

Thomas A. Edison, the great American inventor, says "Fully eighty per cent. of the illness of mankind comes from eating improper food or too much food; people are inclined to over-indulge themselves." This is where indigestion finds its beginning in nearly every case. The stomach can do just so much work and no more, and when you overload it or when you eat the wrong kind of food, the digestive organs cannot possibly do the work demanded of them. It is at such times that the stomach needs help; it demands help, and warns you by headaches, belching, sour stomach, nausea and indigestion. You should attend to this at once by taking something that will actually do the work for the stomach. Kodol will do this. It is a combination of natural digestants and vegetable acids and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. It is pleasant to take. It digests what you eat. Sold by Bowen's Valley Co.

If apples have been frostbitten on the trees it is said to be the better way to allow them to remain on the trees and allow nature to work a cure. The Old Town Enterprise says, "In a short time nature repairs the injury if the fruit is left on the trees. It spoils if it is picked at the time it is frozen."

A member of the household where a crowd had assembled to serenade a bride couple, assaulted the intruders. He was arrested for assault, and was discharged by the judge, and commended for his good behavior. Good for that judge say we. There are other annoyances to which newly wedded couples are subjected to, that ought to be discouraged.

Tell us again how well prohibition is working at Rumford Falls, and what an improvement the Sturges law is to that town. Get out of your shell you old hypocrite—Lisbon Enterprise.

We wonder if any newspaper publisher within a thousand miles more or less can guess who is hit square between the eyes by the Enterprise.

HYPOCRISY.

The Enterprise has the information on excellent authority that the men who pose as temperance advocates in Rumford Falls are connivers at the open nullification of the law. The same condition exists in many towns in Maine. The trouble seems to be that more politicians desire to preach enforcement than wish to practice it. In other words in order to play the game of politics it is necessary to silence one class by patting them on the back while the other side is kept in line with a sly wink of the eye.

The above is an extract from an editorial from the Republican and Prohibition Lisbon Enterprise. The columns of the CITIZEN are open to any who feel aggrieved and wish to play the Enterprise editor.

With the October 23 issue of the Bar Harbor Record, George M. Haskins retired from the management and goes to other fields of labor. It is not announced whether there is to be any change in the policy of the paper or not. The newspaper fraternity loses one of the most honest and upright publishers that it has been our fortune to meet in Maine, and wherever Mr. Haskins may go he will take the good will and well wishes of the people of Bar Harbor, and of all newspaper men with whom he has made acquaintance. Mr. C. P. Bolles of New Bedford, Mass. has bought Mr. Haskins' interest in the corporation.

In the last State campaign the Bangor Commercial—the paper that from the beginning of its career to that time had not faltered in its support of the Democratic policies—stumbled and went lame and almost deserted its patron party, because the Democrats wanted the system of wild land taxation revised, and equitably adjusted. The owner of the paper, Joseph P. Bass, could not rise above personal interest and support the plan. He owned wild land and was also a stockholder in railroads that owned special privileges. The sort of men we need are those who, like the men who signed the Declaration of Independence, using this language: "We pledge our fortunes and sacred honor," will support a righteous principle even though in doing so they may sacrifice a few paltry dollars. The Commercial has not been very cordial in its support of the party since, and there is some hope among the supporters of W. T. Haines that it will become a Haines organ. The members of the Republican party who are prohibitionists first last and all the time are not pleased with the prospect of the Commercial's becoming a Republican paper for it is a license advocate.

The Paper and Pulp Maker's Journal for October editorially says: "Hal my friends, you who toil and sweat, you who are the bread winners of the republic, they tell you that the saloon is the working man's club. They lie! The saloon is the working man's hell."

And yet here in the State where the first great temperance movement had its birth we are told that unless the workman in the mills can get his beer, the mills could not get help. It is for that reason that nullification of the law is permitted in many manufacturing centers in Maine.

We think the saloon is the workman's hell, but the science of home making has not progressed to the point where home is always the opposite—the workman's heaven. If one tenth the effort and expense were put into teaching the girls in the country the art of cooking and the science of pleasant home making, that is now spent in argument with the man whose life habits are formed, and in useless efforts to enforce laws that are not popular, the next or surely the second generation of men and women would be temperate and happy. We recommend the Civic League of this State and similar societies everywhere to try this method. It might not be so exciting and perhaps would not require so much grand stand playing as the present system, but it is worth thinking of.

STOCK MARKET FAKE.

The reader of newspapers was confronted recently, every day for a week or more with big scare headlines telling of the panic in the money market, and the great slump in stocks. Not one in a thousand of the readers were in any way affected because of the panic. It is not a matter of general public concern what goes on in Wall street. The chief thing is for every honest man to keep away from the place and keep his money away also. Wall street and all the chicanery that is practiced there bears no relation to the legitimate business of the country, and if it and all its affairs were wiped out of existence in a night and never heard of again the real business of the country would go on just the same as ever.

If the common people of the country could be made to realize that it is on their earnings that the human sharks in the so-called stock markets live, they could soon close up all the stock exchanges, and oblige the parasites who live in them, to go to work at honest toil or undertake some form of gambling not protected by law.

The newspaper accounts of great fortunes made in a day in stocks has caused and will continue to cause men and women with a few dollars saved up to venture in it hopes that they may be lucky. They are playing against themselves. Beating themselves and their class. If there was not a dollar forth coming from the country people (who know nothing about the game and are so foolish as to think there is some way that they can honestly make one dollar earn them fifty in a day) the stock exchanges could not exist a month. If every newspaper and every preacher would publish and preach these facts until the people grasped the truth of them and acted accordingly the world would be rid of the most demoralizing agency in it—the modern "stock market."

We would not be understood as meaning that there is not an honest business done in stocks and securities. There is and it can be done just the same as all ordinary business is done, just as we sell land and wood. If a man has a lot of land or several hundred cords of wood to sell he seeks a customer and sells the land or wood and it is taken possession of by the buyer who sees what he is buying. He does not go to a broker and say "you put this land or wood on the market and get some one to bet a dollar on every square foot of land or every cord of wood that the price will be higher tomorrow. If the price goes down make him put up the amount that it has fallen off in price. If he fails to do so, inform him that his investment has proven bad and keep the money he has paid." "It is for our interest that the price goes down." He does not do that but that is what is done in the stock market, and the actual exchange of commodities occurs so seldom that a real stock certificate is an unfamiliar sight to the most of those who think they are dealing in them.

Apply the same methods to buying securities that you do merchandise, and you will be safe, in no other way can you be.

HUMOR THAT DIDN'T PAY.
Friends of the Deceased Were Wholly Unappreciative.

"Once in my early career," said a well-known New York magazine editor, "I owned and edited a more or less thrifty weekly newspaper. One of my features was country correspondence, and I prided myself on the accuracy of my rural ads. In one issue, from the best point on my list, I received a notice reading as follows: 'Mr. John Grady, having purchased a plot of ground in Machpelah some months ago, has now gone into real estate body and soul. John was always an enthusiast. The item looked all right to me, and sounded quite enterprising, I thought; but a day or two after the paper had got around among the subscribers I received a letter of 'indignity,' which almost took my breath away. In it I was duly informed that Mr. Grady was dead and buried in the Machpelah cemetery, where he had purchased a plot some three months previously. In conclusion, I may say that my correspondent at that point has since risen to prominence as a humorist, and I suppose most of you have read his stuff in various publications. But that item was not very funny for him, or for me, because he had to get another job far away, and I lost a dozen good subscribers."

LIVING BY THE COMPASS.
New and Quaint Theory That Is Held by French Mystic.

A quaint theory is that a French mystic, who holds that the four points of the compass have an influence on human health and well-being. Traveling westward, asserts this authority, induces melancholy; traveling eastward brings cheerfulness; southward languor and irritability; and northward calmness. It is a question of electrical currents, and the influence is felt not only when traveling, but also when at home. The best posture for working is to face either north or east, says the Frenchman. In these positions you receive positive waves of electricity, the negative currents coming from the other two points, south and west. Even the sleep is improved, it seems, if the foot of the bed be turned to the north or the east. To sleep in the contrary position induces nightmare and general uneasiness.

HOME MADE MIXTURE CURES RHEUMATISM.

Many Can be Happy.

Tells How Any One Can Prepare Simple Home-Made Mixture.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer. Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and tortuous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

NEMO SELF-REDUCING CORSETS

Health, Comfort and Style for Stout Women

Every stout woman would like to look more slender and graceful; and so she will, if she wears the famous Nemo "Self-Reducing" Corset.

The first time a stout woman wears this Corset she finds that her figure has been reduced, and actually "made over," so that her skirts will have to be "taken in" from 3 to 4 inches; and that she has a better shape than she had ever hoped for.

This remarkable result can be accomplished only by the Nemo Corset, with its wonderful "Self-Reducing Strap" which is a patented and exclusive Nemo feature.

Famous physicians and dressmakers recommend the Nemo "Self-Reducing" Corset because of its great hygienic value and its perfect style.

After dinner they all adjourned to the class rooms upstairs which had been prettily decorated and converted into reception rooms. Discussions in regard to the "Relation of the young people to church and town" together with other interesting topics were talked over by the ministers, also remarks were made by Mr. C. A. Mixer, Mr. Harris and Mr. Lucian Blanchard.

A committee was chosen, consisting of Lewis Irish, Fred Strasburg, Miss Charlotte French and Leon Reynolds, to arrange for the next meeting which is to be held at the Baptist church, Rumford Falls. It was voted an enjoyable time as well as a time of encouragement and inspiration to the cause for which the C. E. stands. About twenty from each society attended.

OUR CANDY IS PURE

FRIDAY, THE 13th

By Thomas W. Law

of the street of coin and crime and crossed Broadway. His path was blocked by the fence surrounding old Trinity's churchyard. Grasping the pickets in either hand he stared at the crumbling headstones of those guardians of Mammon who once walked the earth and fought their heart battles, as he was walking and fighting, but who now knew no ten o'clock, no three, who looked upon the stock-gamblers and dollar-trailers as they looked upon the worms that honeycombed their headstones' bases. What thoughts went through Bob Brownley's mind only his Maker knew. For minutes he stood motionless, then he walked down Broadway. He went into the Battery. The benches were crowded with that legion and hostess of humanity—that New York's mighty sewers throw in smiles upon her island benches at every sunrise. Here a sudden brute sleeping off a prolonged debauch, there a lad whose frankness of face and homespun clothes and bewildered eyes spelt "from the farm and mother's watchful love." On another bench an Italian woman who had a half-dozen future dollars' kings and social queens about her, and whose clothes told of the immigrant ship just in port. Bob Brownley apparently saw none. But suddenly he stopped. Upon a bench sat a sweet-faced mother holding a sleeping babe in her arms, while a curly-haired boy nestled his head in her lap and slept through the magic lanes and fairy woods of dream-land. This woman's face was one of those that blend the confidence of girlhood with the uncertainty of womanhood. 'Twas a pretty face, which had been plainly tagged by his Maker for a light-hearted trip through the world, but it had been seared by the iron of the city.

"Mr. Brownley—" She started to rise.

He gently pushed her back with a "hush," unwilling to rob the sleepers of their heaven.

"What are you doing here, Mrs. —?" He halted.

"Mrs. Chase. Mr. Brownley, when I went away from Randolph, Randolph's office I married John Chase; you may remember him as a delivery clerk. I had such a happy home and my husband was good; I did not have to typewrite any longer. These are our two children."

"What are you doing here?"

The tears sprang to her eyes; she dropped them, but did not answer.

"Don't mind me, woman. I, too, have hidden hells I don't want the world to see. Don't mind me; tell me your story. It may do you good; it may do me good; yes, it may do me good."

I had dropped into a seat a few feet away. Both were too much occupied with their own thoughts to notice me or any one else. I could not overhear their conversation, but long afterward, when I mentioned our old stenographer, Bessie Brown, to Bob, he told me of the incident at the Battery. Her husband, after their marriage, had become infected with the stock-gambling microbe, the microbe that gnaws into its victim's mind and heart day and night, while ever fiercer grows the "get rich, get rich" fever. He had plunged with their savings and had drawn a blank. He had lost his position in disgrace, and had landed in the bucket-shop; the sub-tellar pit of the big stock-exchange hell. From there a week before he had been sent to prison for theft, and that morning she had been turned into the street by her landlord. I saw Bob take from his pocket his memorandum book, write something upon a leaf, tear it out and hand it to the woman, touch his hat, and before she could stop him, stride away. I saw her look at the paper, clap her hands to her forehead, look at the paper again and at the retreating form of Bob Brownley. Then I saw her, yes, there in the old Battery park, in the drizzling rain and under the eyes of all, drop upon her knees in prayer. How long she prayed I do not know. I only know that as I followed Bob I looked back and the woman was still upon her knees. I thought at the time how queer and unnatural the whole thing seemed. Later I learned to know that nothing is queer and unnatural in the world of human suffering; that great human suffering turns all that is queer and unnatural into commonplace. Next day Bessie Brown came to our office to see Bob. Not being able to get at him she asked for me.

"Mr. Randolph, tell me, please, what shall I do with this paper?" she said. "I met Mr. Brownley in the Battery yesterday. He saw I was in distress, and he gave me this. I cannot believe he meant it," and she showed me an order on Randolph & Randolph for a thousand dollars. I cashed her check and she went away. From the Battery Bob sought the wharves, the Bowery, Five Points, the hotheouses of the under world of America. He seemed bent on picking out the haunts of misery in the misery-infested metropolis of the new world. For two hours he tramped and I followed. A number of times wondrous wisdom of his God. Beulah Sands had gone beyond her limit and was at peace.

The awful groaning stopped, and an ashen pallor spread over Bob Brownley's face. Before I could catch him he rolled backward upon the floor as dead. Bob Brownley, too, had gone beyond his limit. I bent over him and lifted his head, while the sweet woman-child knelt and covered his face with kisses, calling in a voice like that of a tiny girl speaking to her doll: "Bob, my Bob, wake up, wake up; your Beulah wants you." As I placed my hand upon Bob's heart and felt its beats grow stronger, as I listened to Beulah Sands' childish voice joyfully confident as it called upon the one thing left of her old world, some of my terror passed. In its place came a great, unflinching sense of God's marvelous wisdom. I thought gratefully of my mother's always ready argument that the law of laws, of God's and nature, is that of compensation. I had allowed Bob's head to sink until it rested in Beulah's lap, and from his calm and steady breathing I could see that he had safely passed a crisis, that at least he was not in the clutches of death as I had at first feared.

Bob slept. Beulah Sands ceased her calling and with a smile raised her fingers to her lips and softly said: "Hush, my Bob's asleep." Together we held vigil over our sleeping lover and friend, sharing with the happiness of a child who had no fear of the awakening, I with a silent terror of what would come next. I had seen one mind, waited to the unknown that day. Was it to have a companion to cheer and solace it on its far journey to the great beyond? How long we waited Bob's awakening I could not tell. The clock's hands said an hour; it seemed to me an age. At last his magnificent physique, his unpoisoned blood and splendid brain pulled him through to the new world of mind and heart torture. His eyelids lifted. He looked at me, then at Beulah Sands, with eyes so sad, so awful in their perplexed mournfulness, that I almost wished they had never opened, or had opened to let me see the childlike look that now shone from the girl's. His gaze finally rested on her and his lips murmured "Beulah."

"There, Bob, I thought you would know it was time to wake up." She bent over and kissed him on the eyes again with the loving ardor a child bestows upon its pet.

He slowly rose to his feet. I could see from his eyes and the shudder that went over him as he caught sight of the paper on the desk that he was himself; that memory of the happenings of the day had not fled in his sleep. He rose to his full height, his head went up, and his shoulders back, but only from habit, as if for an instant. Then he folded Beulah Sands to his breast and dropped his head upon her shoulder. He sobbed like a father with the corpse of his child.

"Why, Bob, my Bob, is this the way you treat your Beulah when she's let you sleep so your beautiful eyes would be pretty for the wedding? Is this the way to act before this kind man who has come to take us to the church? Naughty, naughty Bob."

I looked at her, at Bob, in horror. I was beginning to realize the absolute deadness of this woman. From the first look I had known that her mind had fled, but knowledge is not always realization. She did not even know who I was. Her mind was dead to all but the man she loved, the man who through all those long days of her suffering she had silently worshipped. To all but him she was new-born.

At the sound of "wedding," "church," Bob's head slowly rose from her shoulder. I saw his decision the instant I caught his eye; I realized the uselessness of opposing it, and, sick at heart and horrified, I listened as he said in a voice now calm and soothing as that of a father to his child: "Yes, Beulah, my darling, I have slept too long. Bob has been naughty, but we will make up for lost time. Get your hat and cloak and we'll hurry to the church, or we will be late."

With a laugh of joy she followed him to the closet where hung the little gray turban and the pretty gray jacket. He took them from their peg and gave them to her.

"Not a word, Jim," he bade me. "In the name of God and all our friendship, not a word. Beulah Sands will be my wife as soon as I can find a minister to marry us. It is his best. It is right. It is as God would have it, or I am not capable of knowing right from wrong. Anyway, it is what will be. She has no father, no mother, no sister, no one to protect and shield her. The 'system' has robbed her of all in life, even of herself, of everything, Jim, but me. I must try to win her back to herself, or to make her new world a happy one—a happy one for her."

CHAPTER VI.

An old gambler whose life had been spent listening to the rattle of the drop-in-bound-out little roulette ball, was told by a fellow victim, as his last dollar went to the relentless Uger's maw, that the keeper's foot was upon an electric button which enabled him to make the ball drop where his stake was not. He simply said: "Thank God. I thought that prince of cheats, Fate, who all through life has had his foot on the button of my (To be continued.)"

DREAMER.

The Sightseer becomes the "Dreamer" and relates a series of incidents of a remarkable dream.

Prelude.

Dreamland is a place we have all been to. Throughout all ages it has been a famous country, and from its spaceless and limitless confines prophets, poets and sages have brought marvelous tales, that have played prominent parts in the affairs of mankind. As all of us know dreams are subject to no rules, and range from the matter of fact to the fantastically impossible kind. No one has solved the cause of dreams; no one can tell what a dream is. The veil that separates dreamland from the things that are real will be torn aside when the mystery of life is solved, and not before.

The Sightseer recently had a most remarkable dream—perhaps anything similar has never been experienced. The dream covered quite a space of time, and involved matters of a purely local nature. These dream experiences ran the gamut from matters that were serious, and within the limits of both possibility and probability, to the most impossible and grotesquely comical events.

The Sightseer, with this issue begins a series of articles in which the principal features of this remarkable dream will be told. In the account are many things that will make it necessary to refer by name to very many persons living in this town and vicinity. There will undoubtedly be some men whose sense of humor and possible inability to realize certain truths who will be offended at some things that will appear.

To avoid that result as much as possible, all are asked to bear in mind that a dreamer has a license from the Goddess of the Realm of Dreams; and legally cannot be held accountable for anything that he may have dreamed. Yet, lest some cantankerous person should mistake this announcement of preambulation to be a confession of fear, the Sightseer will say that in reality he has no fear, and will shrink no responsibility—he only hopes that all will accept the humorous allusion in a spirit of fun, and hold their peace when now and then things that have been foreshadowed in the dream do not suit them.

For convenience, the Sightseer will be referred to as the "Dreamer" in this series of articles.

The Dreamer had spent the greater part of the day in study and thought upon the circulation problem, and the methods by which the subscription list could be kept down to limits that would not swamp the postal service.

The first chapter of the dream the Dreamer dreamed he dreamed.

In the evening, after reading for the "tenth time" the "Wine of Wizardry" poem in a vain effort to find out what the sense of it was, the Dreamer laid himself back in the great easy chair and drifted off into that hazy dream-land where a mundane minute is as a dream year. (Example: "A day is as a thousand years in the sight of the Lord." Bible.)

Probably no one ever had quite such a dream experience as befell the Dreamer that night; and he has not yet resolved the strange commixions into a comprehensive whole.

He dreamed that he did have a dream from which he awoke, and in his real dream reviewed the events that he had dreamed had come to him in a dream.

The dream from which he dreamed he awoke was this. He dreamed that he fell into a deep sleep, and awoke five years later, but like Rip Van Winkle, was unconscious of having slept more than the usual six or seven hours.

When he awakened from this sub-dream, his experience ran something like this.

It was daylight when he awoke and he instantly became conscious that he had slept all night in the office. The first thing he did was to pull out his watch to see how late he had slept. The movement caused a cloud of dust to arise from his clothes. He looked up at the ceiling, thinking some plastering must have become loosened and fallen upon him. Nothing of that kind having happened, he looked at the watch—it was stopped. "Of course I did not wind it last night," mused the Dreamer. As he began winding he was quite startled to note that the case, instead of being solid gold (it was of a dingy brass color. His first reflection was that while he was sleeping Daniel Ellery Dickey, the night telegraph operator, had come in and exchanged watches with him. "Confound that tricky Dickey," thought the Dreamer, "I'll trim him."

While nursing his wrath against the really unoffending Dickey, he bethought himself to look at the works of the time piece. Lo, he recognized his own watch. He then again looked at the brass case, and dreamily cursed Renbarns the jeweller for a swindler. By that time he had got sufficiently awake to make an effort to get on to his feet. As he placed his hand upon the arm of the chair he felt a disagreeable sensation and, upon looking down, was quite surprised to find a thick layer of dust all over the chair. As Capt. Hawley, the janitor, had always kept the office spot clean, the Dreamer was thoroughly perplexed. These several events were so uncommon that as he got on to his feet he formulated an idea that he had been made a victim of practical jokes.

The natural impulse to bathe immediately after rising in the morning led the Dreamer to the office lavatory. As he turned the faucet he experienced the feeling of dread that every one does who is compelled to use the water. Much to his surprise, instead of a stream of iron rust and generally offensive looking liquid, a clean, clear and spring like water gushed forth. This was such a surprise that the Dreamer felt his faith in miracles reviving.

After bathing his hands and face and sensing the same satisfaction that such ablutions afforded him before coming to Rumford Falls, he started out with the intention of getting breakfast.

As he passed out of the building the first thing that attracted his attention was a familiar voice calling out "Hello Mass, I'll roll you one." Turning in the direction of the voice, which he recognized as that of Dana Burdett, the Dreamer beheld a young man wearing a pair of long silky mustaches. As the day before such a thing was not even a dreamable possibility the Dreamer considered that Dana was masquerading, and making some remark to the effect that he "needed a trimming" the Dreamer continued his way.

When opposite the post office, or where in his dream befuddled mind it was the night before, he was nearly struck speechless by seeing George Locke bowling along the street with a hat on his head. To the best of the Dreamer's recollection, that was Locke's first appearance with a hat on his head.

By this time he had become a little doubtful in his mind as to the reality of things, but as he kept on and presently began to bob up and down and reel and stumble as he walked over the brick pavements on Congress street, he experienced a feeling of relief and assurance. The uneven botch of sidewalk was just the same as it was the night before.

Gathering fresh inspiration from that circumstance the Dreamer crossed the street and ascended the steps leading to the hotel. It was rather quiet there but the dining room was open and the Dreamer entered, and was shown to a seat. He had a good meal, and then with a feeling of confidence walked up to the desk to pay. He threw down 50c, and started to go out. Mr. Bray coughed slightly to attract attention, and as the Dreamer turned again to the desk, Mr. Bray said, "That was a 50 cent piece you handed me; you know the dinner price now is 75 cents." "Dinner," echoed the Dreamer; and then thinking of his run down watch and the many peculiar things that had occurred, he glanced up at the clock, and was nearly dumfounded to see the hands indicating 2 o'clock. Without a word the Dreamer threw down a quarter, and went out.

On the way back to the office the Dreamer did some hard thinking, and did not even take his eyes from the pavement. As he opened the office door he was nearly overcome with astonishment, for there in bright letters he read, "Office of the Daily CITIZEN."

ZEN." As he entered the office he again had recourse to explanation, and he could think of no one who would play so expensive a joke as that, and made up his mind that the fellows of the building had clubbed together and hired Hardy to change the sign.

With this plausible solution of that difficulty he seated himself at the desk. Not long after, Mr. LeBel stuck his head in at the door and said, "How long before the CITIZEN will be out?" "Why, next Thursday of course," said the Dreamer. "What's the matter with you, getting cranky?" replied LeBel as he slammed the door and went away. "Ah, he's the promoter of all this tomfoolery," mused the Dreamer. Seems to me they are making a great fuss over an over dose of sleep on my part.

Just then the door opened and in stepped the Dreamer's friend Fred J. Rolfe, but lordy massy what a change in him from the day before. He had on a fancy shirt, collar, cuffs, and a shiny silk hat, and a stylish suit of clothes. Before the Dreamer could recover himself enough to even greet his friend, Mr. Rolfe advanced and extended his hand and said "Glad to see you back again. You must come in and see us. The place does not look much like it did when you wrote the description of it for the Old CITIZEN."

The appearance of Mr. Rolfe in such strange attire and making such strange remarks caused the Dreamer to think he surely had lost his wits. While still speaking, Mr. Rolfe had laid on the desk a booklet and a card. The Dreamer glanced at the cover of the pamphlet and saw the cut of a magnificent building and high hills in the rear. Across the front of the building was the sign "Hotel Thornton." The card read as follows: "Zircon Valley Park Association. Fred J. Rolfe President, Rufus Virgin Treasurer."

While still stupefied with astonishment at the latest strange development and hardly able to say a word, the Dreamer saw Mr. Rolfe start for the door, and as he did so he repeated the invitation to visit him at the Park.

The Dreamer began to put one thing and another together and finally came to the conclusion that every one had entered into the plot to mystify him. After thinking matters over for a while he decided to go out on the corner and watch the progress of events—surely there must be some folks not in league against him.

He had not been standing long on the corner when he received the greatest surprise of the day. He heard the toot of an automobile horn, and looking up, saw approaching at a slow and careful rate of speed, Dr. Nile's machine in charge of his chauffeur. With eyes fairly bulging from their sockets, the Dreamer watched the machine go around the corner onto and up Congress in the same leisurely manner. The shock of such an unheard of thing was too much for the Dreamer's nerves, and he went back into the office and locked the door, and did not again venture out until night fall.
